server of the Sabbath, his whole past life down to his late tour through the southern states disproves.

Mr. Clay's friends act unwisely in the course they pursue. If they were candidly to acknowledge that he is a card player for money, and a profane swearer, and beg the forgiveness of his political friends for his indulgences, and their associates. With them, Mr. Clay already holds one of the royal that the King can do no wrong. It is true, it might injure him with the mass of the whigs, who having no expectations of official patronage, are still inflaenced by motives of patriatism and morality, and would shrink with anaffected horror, at the idea of elevating to the highest office in the nation, the man who almost daily sets such a ruinous example to the present and rising genera-

But to the fact. Mr. Clay is an ha bitual card player for money. H plays at private houses and public to erns, and openly for money. He doe not pretend to deny it, he does not po tend to conceal it. He played one on board the boat which took ham Wheeling to Maysville on his late turn from W. shington for money. He has repeated it in Lexington since has return; and on one occasion, where he lost his money, he cursed his partner for bad playing, so p ofanely, although he was a personal and political friend. that one of the party said that had he used him so, he would trave knocked him down.

But why pretend to multiply cases, when his whole career is stained with a series of such acts. I authorize you I admonish you, beware, lest, having no feeling to say that Mr. Clay was at the Blue for the sorrows of another, you be called to weep Lick last week, and during several days for your own sorrows; lest your own kindred fall was intently engaged in card playing by the hand of the very murderer for whom you for money, and as was generally reported and believed, he was successful. But as is usual with him, whenever he was I sing, he cursed profinely, and lost his temper; but when winning, he was blan I, witty and agreeable.

well remember the sensation produced by the tale at, but openly JUSTIFIES DISUNION in the of wo as it came flying from city to city, and at lenth reached his ill starred family. A young, accomplished, and pious wife, with a little group of tender children, await the mail from Washington, for tidings from the husband and father. The strange hand upon the outside of the letter excites al compact, its objects, designs and the great elsurprise and trepidation: with fear and trembling the fatal seal is broken:

... Your husband is dead-killed in a duel: he husband, she could, by divine grace, have borne, but his crime drove her to distraction; the children in terror stare at the wild horror of the mother; a look at her children redoubles the streams of fiery agony that played along every nerve and fibre of her whole being. Such a scene might well arouse the whole State-the entire land. It did so -Every pulpit spoke out against dueling. But what good can we do to weep over the bloodshed, and yet honor the men who shed it? I am tired of dealing with the su'ject; and if the citizens of this and other States will go and deliberately VOTE FOR A DUELIST FOR PRESIDENT -one who has acted upon the principles of revenge all his days, and who yet deliberately avows them-then I say when your fellow citizens are murdered at Washington, make no ado about it, ask no sympathy, demand no retribution; but say, like men, we chose a murderer to shoot them if they did not behave according to refined notions of propriety, and we sent them there to be shot if he thought best. Either make the tree corrupt, or else let them both be good; LET PRECEPT AND EXAMPLE GO TOGETHER. It is vain for us to preach against dueling, to lament its prevalence, while our heroes go and VOTE FOR DUELISTS.

Extract from a discourse by Rev. Lyman Beecher D. D., entitled The Remedy for Ducling.

"Permit me now, my friends, to ask you so emnly, will you any longer persist in your attachment to duelists? Will you any longer either deliberately or falsely, vote for them? Will you ounce allegiance to your Maker, and cast the Bible behind your back? Will you confide in men void of the fear of God and destitute of moral from other States, will be present.

Are you patriots, and will you constitute those legislators, who despise you, and despise equal laws, and wage war with Providence. The tyrants of Algiers the eternal principles of justice? Are you Christians, and, by holding up duelists, will you deluge the land with blood, and fill it with widows and orphans? Will you aid in the prostration of justice-in the escape of criminals-in the extinction of liberty? Will you place in the chair of state, in the Senate, or on the bench of justice, men he would retain the support of a large who, if able, would murder you for speaking number of such deacons and pastors. truth? Will you teach your children that there is no guilt in murder? Will you instruct them to think lightly of dueling, and train them up to attributes of the British constitution destroy or be destroyed in that bloody field !-Will you bestow your suffrage, when you know that by withholding it, you may arrest this deadly evil-when this, too is the only way in which it can be done, and when the present is, perhaps, the only period in which resistance can avail-when the remedy is so easy, so entirely in your power; and when God, if you do not punish these guilty men, will most inevitably punish you?

Had you beheld a dying father conveyed, bleeding, agonizing to his distracted family-had you heard their piercing shrieks, and witnessed their tragic agony, would you reward the savage man who had plunged them in distress? Had the duelist destroyed your neighbor-had your own father been killed by the man who solicits your suffrage-had your son, hill low by his hand, heen brought to your door, pale in death, and weltering in blood-would you then toink the crime a small one? Would you honor with your confidence, and elevate to power by your vote, the guilty monster? And what would you think of your neighhors, if, regardless of your agony, they should reward him? And yet such scenes of unutterable anguish are multiplied every year.

"Every year the duelist is cutting down the neighbor of somebody. Every year, and many times in the year, a father is brought dead or dying to his family, or a son laid breathless at the feet of his parents; and every year, you are patronizing by your votes, the men who permit these crimes, and looking with cold indifference upon, and even mocking the sorrows of your neighbor. Beware, vote, or by the hand of some one whom his example has trained to the work of blood.
